

winter. They had walked hundreds of miles, and their feet bled on the way to Jerusalem. Many of them had spent their last farthing to get there, and they had left some of those who started with them dying or dead by the roadside. An aged woman, exhausted with the long way, begged her fellow pilgrims to let her die until she had seen the Holy City. As she came to the gate of the city she could not take another step, but she was carried in, and then said, "Now hold my head up, till I can look upon Jerusalem," and her head lifted, she took one look and said, "Now I die content, I have seen it." Some of us before we reach the heavenly Jerusalem may be as tired as that, but angels of mercy will help us in, and one glimpse of the temple of God and the Lamb, and one good look at the "King in his beauty," will more than compensate for all the toils and tears and heartbreaks of the pilgrimage. Hallelujah! Amen!

One Way to Redden the Cheeks.
"Constant Reader" wants the recipe for bringing blood to the cheeks and lips in place of using paint. Ten drops of oil of mustard in an ounce of alcohol is the formula. Squeeze the cheeks and lips with a few drops of this half an hour before you wish to present your self.

It will soon smart and redden the skin, but must not be allowed to burn more than five minutes. Wash off and apply a touch of cold cream or the new toilet cream, which is so fragrant, so healthy to the skin, which does not grease the skin or produce down on the face, which it seems nearly all the toilet salves, glycerines and fatty preparations have the weakness to encourage. En passant, if there is no good blood in the system, if you are anemic or bilious, you can't get up a good color even by blustering your cheeks.

If a boat could steam down the Narrows three or four times a day with a load of ladies in easy dress who should exercise from the time of starting till they came back it would be the best school of color for feminine faces. If you can't get ocean or lake air take the highest and purest you can reach; live in it, work in it as far as possible, and let these pretences of mustard and ginger and carmine go by.—Shirley Dare in New York Herald.

Plaster Houses.
An innovation in building has been suggested which, although it can hardly yet be said to have been fairly tested, seems to possess excellent points. The framework of a house is erected in the ordinary way, and for large buildings iron or steel may be used. On the studding of this framework a metal lathing is nailed, which covers everything except the doors and windows. The meshes of the lath are diamond shaped and the surfaces are turned at an angle. The lath is first coated with a mixture of mortar and cement, afterward is added an inch of cement which is finished and lined in imitation of any kind of stone. The cost is said to be but little in excess of the ordinary methods.—New York Commercial Advertiser.

Not Much.
A certain priest was attending the deathbed of a wealthy old lady, and picked up his ears when he heard her say slowly and with difficulty:
"Father—I've—given—you—"
"Stay," cried he, anxious to have witnesses for this nuptial testament; "I'll call in the family."
When the family had assembled the old lady resumed:
"Father—I've—given—you—a great—deal of trouble."
And exhausted with the effort she fell back and expired.—All the Year Round.

The Counterfeiting Business.
Speaking of counterfeit money a detective said that there was very little of it in circulation these days. "The time was ten years ago," he said, "when a man received a counterfeit bill on an average of once a week. It is rare that a man who handles a great deal of money runs across a counterfeit bill once a month now. Most of the expert counterfeiters are in prison, and those who are out are so closely watched by the detectives that they have little chance to work."
"No new talent in the counterfeiting line is being developed, and the chances of detection are so numerous and certain that the ambitious young crook turns his abilities in other directions. Now and then a clever counterfeit appears, but the secret service men run it down so quickly that it does not pay 'smart people' to attempt to run a currency factory of their own. There is some counterfeiting of small silver pieces carried on, but the work is so base that it rarely gets into general circulation, only the ignorant people being deceived by it. Counterfeiting will be one of the 'lost arts' before many years."—Cincinnati Commercial Gazette.

Fire from Steam Pipes.
In an article on the danger of fire from steam pipes it is said that after wood has remained a long time in contact with steam, hot water or hot air pipes the surface becomes carbonized, and during warm weather the charcoal absorbs moisture; when again heated the moisture is driven off, leaving a vacuum into which the fresh air current, circulating around the pipes, rapidly penetrates and imparts its oxygen to the charcoal, causing a gradual burning and eventually combustion.—Berlin Letter.

Salt Preserves Bouquets.
In the first place put a little salt, a tablespoonful or more, in the bottom of the vase. Then fill the vase with ice broken into pieces the size of a walnut. On this put the bouquet, the same as you put the stems into a glass of water. Never put any water into the vase, however. Enough comes from the melting ice and salt.—New York Journal.

A Mexican was running a mowing machine in a field of alfalfa near Las Cruces, N. M., when he uncovered a colony of skunks. A number were killed by the mower, and the Mexican called for help to assist in exterminating the colony. The fight was kept up with pitchforks and clubs till fifty-two skunks were slaughtered.

A choke bore gun is one the bore of which is slightly constricted near the muzzle. The arrangement is used in sporting shotguns, and is intended to keep the shot from scattering, and thus to make the fire more close.
